Silk Ribbon Weavers Will Demand

More Wages This Evening. The indications to-day are that a strike of silk-ribbon weavers seems inevitable. At a mass-meeting of the Silk-Ribbon Weavers' Union last night, at the West Side Labor Lyceum, delegates from sev en factories reported that their constit lents were earning starvation wages Formerly, it was said, weavers earned Formerly, it was said, weavers earned from $2$ to $4$ a day, now they are scarcely making $5$ a week. They are paid by the piece, but reduced hours, coupled with a reduction in wages, save brought the men to starvation's door.

It was decided to propose a schedule of wages to the employers which would restore wages to something like the former figure. If the employers refuse to accele to these terms, the union has declared its intention of ordering a strike by next Monday.

Committees were appointed to confer with the employers.

Another mass-meeting will be held tomorrow night at Brodbeck's Hall, Ninth avenue, near Forty-second street.

The silk-ribbon manufacturers deny that their employees are dissatisfied with their present wages.

It was learned this morning that the men in each factory will go in a body to their employers, as soon as the looms cease to work this afternoon, and make a formal demand for higher wages.

The committees appointed at last night is meeting to confer with the employers met this morning at 342 West Forty-second street, and declared that, if the demand made in each factory this afternoon, is not acceded to, the strike will take place as early as Friday, instead of Monday, as was originally intended. There are at present 1,000 weavers out 61 work.

A motion for a new trial was made by Lawyer McClelland, his counsel, who also made a strong plea for clemency for his client. He said that the prisoner was suffering from consumption and could not stand a long sentence, and he also read an affidavit from Dunphy's mother, who said that this son was the sole support of herself and family.

Justice Barrett denied the motion for a new trial, and said he was sorry he could not extend the clemency asked for in Dunphy's case. The testimony he said, had shown that the election in Dunphy's district was a farce, and he should have thought of his poor mother and ill-health then, instead of wilfully silowing violations of the law, which had brought him into his present unfortunate position.

The reason assigned for the desired dissolution is the withdrawal of members because of the extraordinary deathrate in the order last year. The petition shows that the order had 161 deaths and were liable under agreement with the members to pay the representatives of the deceased about $140,000.

The strain has become so heavy that many of the members have withdrawn.

Lawyer George F. Elliott, of Brooklyn, o-day made public his brief submitted to Gov. Flower, petitioning the Executive to recall the proclamation ordering a special election in the Eighth Ward to special election in the Eighth Ward to fill the vacancy in the Kings County Board of Supervisors.

Mr. Elliott alleges that "the constitution of the State of New York confers no power upon the State Executive to call general or special elections upon the happening of a vacancy in the office of Supervisor of a ward of Brooklyn."

After reciting the history of the case and quoting the law, Mr. Eilist ennestity petitions Gov. Flower to reconsider the action and recall the proclamation.

NEW POST-OFFICE PLAN.

10.32 Separate Appropriations for Ten

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Postmaster-General Bissell's plan to place the postal service of the ten largest cities of the country un-der the practical management of their Postmasters will be a radical innova-tion in the system of the Department tion in the system of the Department if it is adopted. The House Committee on Post Offices will devote itself to the consideration of the matter forthwith, holding a special meeting next Monday, at which the Postmaster-General will be invited to appear and to explain the proposed change.

According to the explanations made by Assistant Postmaster-General Jones, it is proposed to deduct from the estimates for the postal service the amounts which the Department would probably assign to the ten leading cities and have Congress make a separate appropriation of a certain sum for each one. This money would be at the command of the several portmasters to draw upon and utilize as they saw fit, giving them the same power held by the managers of private business concerns.

The postmasters themselves are machinesis to the plan.
